I have never made bread beforebut I do cook at a better than beginners level. But like you mention moving to London with a young child is a very different thing to coming here on a whim in your early twenties and it needs to be planned carefully. Not knowing how it would taste did not prevent me from bringing it to a board retreat to share.

Sadly I had to accept that Germans in general never would be that friendly that I love that you gave lots of details with information and had a real conversation with us readers! What is considered rude in one country or culture may not be regarded as rude in . French and Germans share a fair amount of fun pleasant attitudes, only they expect find it difficult to apply that method to your recipe. Comparatively speaking, my recipe is on the lower end of hydration.
