Djeser-Djeseru and the other buildings of Hatshepsut's Deir el-Bahri complex are considered to be significant advances in architecture. That most of these women are not as well known as Cleopatra and Hatshepsut has prompted Ayad to speculate why they have been relegated to the footnotes of history. One of her most important advisors was Senenmut. Some historic studies indicate noble women in ancient Egypt worked as Consort of the Female Pharaoh, doctors, governors, judges, high-ranking priestesses and supervisors. However, if we really need a parallel for the Theban royal family we should perhaps look closer to our own time; Kennedy-like clans where the women, although themselves not the holders of supreme office, play an important role in the functioning of the family as a single effective unit of government are not particularly rare, while the British monarchy itself has recently found that a suitable spouse, correctly presented, can help to boost the status of the entire royal family. Daughter of King Thutmose I. The sophisticated water technologies of the ancient Nabataeans. Dorman eds.
