This discovery of love as a source of knowledge, which is part of the primordial experience of every man and woman, finds authoritative expression in the biblical understanding of faith. Faith knows because it is tied to love, because love itself brings enlightenment. Thus we bring to the Mass a profound reverence and charity to our neighbour, shown in the way we act and dress, putting aside selfishness and division. True, it engages our affectivity, but in order to open it to the beloved and thus to blaze a trail leading away from self-centredness and towards another person, in order to build a lasting relationship; love aims at union with the beloved.

That was very nice of zatsutodo the translation, btw. JAGOGiurai. Fiordilig sighing! It might seem that the Greek version of the Bible, by translating "be established" as "understand", profoundly altered the meaning of the text by moving away from the biblical notion of trust in God towards a Greek notion of intellectual understanding.
