Jadranka is a talented artist and an individualist. In one young woman, Chiara Ravello, is about to flee occupied Rome for the safety of her grandparents' house. In his mind, he's still bobbing in that frigid water. The things his daughter did that screwed up her life and what she did to try and protect her only brother. Two distinct personalities trying to find their unique places in the family fold, each going about it in her own way. His parents are unable to discuss the matter with their growing grandchildren, causing flame-haired Jadranka to find solace in her painting. This moving story of a family torn apart by politics, war, and secrets is a wonderful Bio.
